Are you a parent, a school teacher or someone who works with children? Honeypot are launching a national campaign over the summer which will start during national carer's week (Monday 14th June – Friday 20th June 2010). The campaign will finish at the end of the school holidays. The event is called Busy Bees and will encourage children to fundraise for Honeypot by taking on the role of a young carer and helping out around the home. Children can raise sponsorship money by carrying out jobs similar to those that a young carer may have to do.

There are around 175,000 young carers living in the UK today with many more are unknown to us. Busy Bees is a great opportunity to raise money for Honeypot and young carers while giving more privileged children a chance to learn about the difficulties that thousands of other children face each day.
